Work Already Begun On Construction To Double Size Of Power Auxiliary In Central California

In order to use some of the newly discovered gas field in the new Elk Hill oil territory of Kern county, for the generation of electricity to aid in coping with the power shortage existing throughout the San Joaquin valley, A. G. Wishon, general manager of the San Joaquin Light & Power Corporation yesterday announced the immediate expenditure of $1,000,000 for the construction of an addition to its natural gas and all burning steam plant in Bakersfield that will double the size of the present huge plant and double its output of electric power. To Save Fuel Oil.

This will enable the power company to use natural gas entirely in the generation of electricity in this plant, completely eliminating the burning of crude oil which is now required to a marked degree next year the high cost of steam generation from increased oil costs which has been the most serious problem the power company has had to contend with in the unsuccessful struggle to keep down operating costs and at the same time give the maximum amount of service possible. When complete, the new plant will represent a total investment of more than $2,000,000. In operation by May 1st.

Work has already begun on the new plant, all materials have been ordered, and it will be completed in full operation by the first of next May, in time for the spring pumping load. At the present time the big steam plant has an output of approximately 17,000 horsepower. This will be increased to 35,000 horsepower, making the plant the largest natural gas steam power plant in the West. It will be used, consequently, to generate electricity for the period, in order to make use of as much natural gas as possible, and several years hence, when some of the new hydro-electric power houses are complete and there is a sufficient supply of water-power, it is hoped then to use this plant as a standby steam unit for emergency purposes, as was the original intention at the time it was built.

New 12-Inch Gas Line. In order to transport the additional supply of natural gas, the Midway Gas company is laying approximately fifty miles of 12-inch line from the Elk Hills to Bakersfield, which will have a daily carrying capacity of approximately 25,000,000 cubic feet. At the present time the Bakersfield steam plant is using about 1,000,000 cubic feet of gas a day, which was laid last summer connecting up with the Midway Gas company line between the Kern county boundary and Los Angeles, twenty-six miles south of Bakersfield.

Double Output of Plant. The present plant consists of two turbo-generators having a capacity of approximately 15,000 kilowatts, which is almost 17,000 horsepower. The new equipment to be installed will be a single unit Alfa Romeo turbo-generator of 15,000 kilowatt capacity of the very latest design constructed for operation under 250 pounds steam pressure. The latest boiler installation will consist of a battery of ten 825 horsepower Sterling boilers manufactured by Babcock-Wilcox Company. These boilers will have capacity of approximately 15,000 kilowatts or 20,000 horsepower. All of the other appurtenances, such as condensers, superheaters, circulating pumps, boiler feed pumps, transformers, oil, switches and other auxiliaries have been ordered and are en route in shipment.

The current will be generated at 2300 volts, and will step up through a bank of three 10,000-volt transformers for delivery onto the high line transmission system. The present steel building housing the plant is being enlarged. Work is progressing under the charge of A. Y. Mendell, superintendent of the steam plant. H. E. Nord, the engineer in charge of the plant installation. The entire operation is under the supervision of E. A. Quinn, the financial manager of the company, in charge of the design and operation of the big steam plant.

Rapid progress is being made in the construction of the new 110,000-volt line extending from the new Kernocholt Power House along the San Joaquin river in Fresno county to McKittrick, in the heart of the Kern county oil field. A total distance of 125 miles. When the output of the new Kernocholt plant at its very much heavier voltage is turned into the present transmission line, it will have the capacity of improving service conditions materially.

The new high tension transmission line will have a carrying capacity of 10,000 kilowatts or 13,000 horsepower. It is being erected on steel cross-arms on 50-foot poles. The aluminum wires are 3/4-inch in diameter and the quantity of aluminum used is 850,000 pounds. New Station at McKittrick. There are three step-down substations, stepping the voltage down from 110,000 volts to 70,000 volts. The first of these substations is located at McKittrick, where the line from the Elk Hills to Bakersfield, which will have a daily carrying capacity of approximately 25,000,000 cubic feet. ## NEED AWAKENING OF CONSCIENCE

—First Unitarian—

"Conscience" formed the subject of the morning sermon at the First Unitarian church yesterday. Rev. Thomas Clayton, pastor of the church, was the preacher. He claimed that the nation and the age were in need of an awakening of conscience. Prosperity and war had tended, he said, to blunt moral consciousness.

"We have several theories as to the origin of that thing we call conscience. The oldest we can remember was that 'Conscience is the voice of God in the soul.' On the whole, we must concede this is still a good definition. Some say that conscience is a native, or intuitive faculty, and as such, is unerring. Though it may be often misapplied, though intuitive, it is naturally stronger in women than men. This assertion may be open to discussion. The majority of thinkers of today, declare that conscience is a racial product, developed in the experience of the race, and therefore a matter of education, each of these theories contains some truth. Conscience may be regarded as a divine illumination; as being an intuitive perception of right and wrong; but needing development through education, the same may be said of the intellect. How to Regard Conscience.

In a discussion of the subject, 'Conscience is to be thought of as the consensus of human judgment as to what is right and best in the conduct of the race, and of the individual.'

Conscience has grown with the race, as the result of experience, and is therefore a social product. Primitive man had little or no conscience. Education, governed mainly by brute instincts. He could do, therefore, he did, what he desired, without a thought as to its ethical significance. The barbarian had some degree of conscience, and a consequent sense of duty. We think of it as being full of flaws.

We have connected the possession of conscience with what we call 'civilized' peoples. It is supposed to be the distinguishing quality; yet, different nations have very different notions of what is right and wrong, when we get down to details. Conscience as Related to Religion.

It has always seemed to me closely allied to religious practices, and, in fact, it is less dependent upon the religious spirit. A low state of religious experience has always been connected with a lack of conscience. Certain it is, that the low class religious instinct, is accompanied by an alarming deadness of conscience.

Education and experience develop conscience. This is seen in the evolution of the race. Formerly, religion was not considered wrong, and was, expressly permitted by religion. Even Paul could advise a young slave to return to his master.

Today, slavery is regarded with horror, and is one of the worst of human iniquities. Formerly, it was considered to be a religious duty, and is now held in abhorrence. Race, antipathy was, surely taught as a sacred duty, but in our conscience we all feel it is wrong. So now we have grown to think of the manufacture, sale or use of intoxicating beverages, as evil, and have made it a crime to be punished by law. Looking back over all this development, do we not see clearly that conscience has been developed by human experience and education.

Conscience May Be Warped. On the other hand, we see how easily conscience may be warped, so as to encourage grave wrongs, as if they were right. This is done by false education. The Arabian law of hospitality is an illustration; the life of a guest is sacred to the Arab so long as he is a guest, but after his departure it is perfectly proper to ride after him and rob him of everything, and if advisable, to murder him in cold blood. This he feels is in full accord with his religion and his moral code.

The German soldier feels he has done nothing for which he should be hated, even though he has outdone the Hun in cruelty and wanton outrages; for he was educated to believe that the German people are the chosen people of God, and fully authorized by Him to annihilate all the 'degenerate' peoples, and take possession of their wealth and country. He must not hunt men's consciences, for men's consciences have given no evidence of a change of belief or of heart in this matter, and in their future relations with other peoples, will be influenced by this fact of conscience.

Power of Conscience. This leads us to consider the power of conscience. The power of conscience is a powerful force, and it is one of the most important factors in the life of the individual. It is the power that enables us to distinguish between right and wrong, and to act accordingly. It is the power that enables us to resist temptation, and to stand firm in the face of adversity. It is the power that enables us to live a life of integrity, and to achieve the highest goals of human existence.

To begin with, its plot is ingenious, ingenious as only an Arthur H. Conan Doyle can be, weaving into a detective story threads of intrigue, romance and dare-devil adventure, but still preserving those essential factors of unity and realism. The play, as one might suppose from the advertisement, is melodramatic. It is melodramatic in sense, of course, a detective story, but if it arouses any enthusiasm, but there is no point in the plot where it has been necessary to sacrifice plausibility for dramatic effect. Surely this is a noteworthy achievement.

As regards acting, it is naturally the star, and a very good star he makes too, not only in the displays of skill and strength for which he is famous, but in his character acting as well. He is supported by an excellent male cast, two female roles rather well taken, and several comical characters, both men and women.

The story opens with Houdini in the star reporter called Dully Call, entering in a box which is to result in an added number of subscriptions for the paper which he represents. His part in the plot is taken advantage of and he finds himself accused of the murder of his friend. The plot is then rapidly unrolled in an surprising but nevertheless convincing climax.

Bessie Barriscale
Portraying two girls whose striking resemblance accounts for much interest in the picture.

Power of conscience in our life, both social and individual.

1. It can create a sense of guilt as powerful as to become painful, unbearable, and often to lead men and women to self-destruction. 'Conscience makes cowards of us all,' wrote the greatest of poets.

2. But conscience also makes men heroic, and fills them with an unconquerable spirit. Cromwell, wisely substituted for the rabble in the Parliamentary army.

3. Men who had a conscience, in what they did, and I protest to you they were never beaten. 'The tale of the house of commons.'

4. Luther's famous words are unimpaired. 'When told to recant his heresies or lose the emperor's protection he said, "It is neither good nor right to go against conscience. Here I stand, I can do no other. God help me!" Conscience made Luther a great hero.'

Conscience as a Character Builder. The finest recommendation you can give to man is the gift of him. 'He is thoroughly understanding and sympathetic.' Conscience is the finest police protection in the world; and were it not for this conscientious power, we should never be safe at home or abroad, by day or by night. This gives us the comforting reflection that mankind is not all bad, but fairly good and honest, and the police have mercy to lead us from the darkness of the evil life.

The Public Conscience is Now Sick. Both our nation and our age are sorely needing an awakening of conscience. Prosperity and peace, have combined to blunt men's consciences. All classes are abusing conscience, it is not stifling it, and tramping it underfoot. This is the result of unlimited greed and selfish indulgence, which are the deadly enemies of a lively conscience. The language of nations is a cheering sign (as far as it goes) of an awakening conscience among the nations. But it reveals the weakness as well as the strength of conscience; for it falls short of absolute human justice, and even its moderate goodness is obscured by many.

The Remedy. The restoration of a healthy conscience in society, requires a campaign of enlightenment, yet more gathering of the transcendental millions for faith seems to be essential to awaken men to their evil doings. The best tonic of all would be a great religious revival which would probe men's consciences to the bottom.

PLAN MAMMOTH PILE OF TIRES

Legion Committee Hard At Work In Campaign For Red Cross

With the Red Cross to profit by the size of the pile which is obtained on December 19 and 20, the committee from the American Legion which has the old tire pile campaign in hand, expects to redouble its efforts this week in the preparatory work of the drive.

Already nearly all the garages in the city have been approached and many have signified their willingness and eagerness to act as sub stations for the deposit of tires up to the date when the pile will begin to grow. Further many of these garages have promised to donate all the old tires from their own cars. This has also been done by many large concerns using fleets of automobiles.

Letters have been mailed out to many individuals asking them to bring their tires to courthouse park on the days of the drive and assist in making the old tire days here a record breaker. Piles larger than a house have been obtained in other cities, it is stated, and it is expected that there will be a goodly number secured here as there are many automobiles in the city and environs.

Bills are to be asked for the pile of old rubber pools when the drive is over and the proceeds turned over to the Red Cross to aid in the Christmas suit fund which is used in the fight against tuberculosis.

On a charge of pandering, John Camaniana, proprietor of the Fresno Rooms at 1128 J street, was arrested late Saturday night by inspectors Merrill and Nichols and locked up in the county jail.

Eva Molino, a chambermaid at the Fresno Rooms, was also arrested on a charge of vagrancy and placed under quarantine in the county jail. According to the inspectors who made the arrests, complaints have for some time past been made that girls who applied for situations as chambermaids at the Fresno Rooms, were lured into a life of vice by Camaniana, some of the girls being said to be respectable before going to work in the rooming house.

The inspectors claim that they have several girls who will testify against Camaniana. The evidence upon which the arrest was made was obtained by police agents, and is said to be strong enough to convict both man and woman.

FRESNO I. W. W. KANSAS WITNESS

Tells of Operations of Arson Squad to Destroy Crops

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 13.—Testimony purporting to show activities of I. W. W. in committing sabotage in this country was introduced by the government today in the trial of 88 alleged members of the organization, being held in the Federal district court in Kansas City, Kansas.

Albert Counts of Fresno, Cal., testified he had been a "back end" for the I. W. W., which meant he was one to commit sabotage. He was a chemist, he said, and had had a laboratory at Stockton, Cal., where he made "kittles." The "kittles" were a mixture of chemicals, placed in a bottle. After a certain time, the chemicals ate away the cork in the bottle and became inflammatory. The laboratory was known as "an ark" to the I. W. W., he testified.

Counts had been brought to the Federal court room, where the government intended to introduce it as evidence. The defense object, however, that Counts' actions prior to 1917, when he was organizing the I. W. W., had nothing to do with the present case. The evidence was not submitted.

"I saw where the I. W. W. was leading me," Counts said, after he had left the witness stand. "What I saw I quit." He is 24 years old.

E. F. Swanson, sheriff of Saline county, Kansas, testified that he had as a prisoner in his jail in 1916, O. E. Gordon, one of the defendants in the present trial. Gordon told him, Swanson said, that "the present government must be destroyed." He also had advocated the destruction of New York city and also of farm crops. Swanson said, "because new ideas of government must supplant the present ones."

Government witnesses told of their operations when they acted as "back ends" or saboteurs, as they were known by their comrades, for the organization. Eugene Wernke, 36 years old, who said he was a reformer, I. W. W., testified that soon after he joined the organization in July, 1916, he was made an organizer and assigned to the "straw" (wheat) belt.

Questioned as to activities expected to result in a general strike in the wheat fields in 1917, he said: "They desired to starve the army and believed that was a good way to prevent themselves from being sent into service."

Price told the police that he was driving at a moderate rate of speed, going north on N street, when the injured boy ran out from behind a truck right in front of his car.

Republican Staff Frolics In Snow At Alder Springs

Frolicking and picnicking in the snow formed the diversion yesterday of forty-five members of the Fresno Republican staff and their friends, the trip to Alder Springs where from three to five feet of snow greeted the visitors being made in nine automobiles.

A long slide of at least 500 feet was arranged and a sled obtained, all the members of the party taking a ride, and complimenting Miss Mary Thomas, who was instrumental in arranging the party, on the idea.

Hot coffee and "hot dogs" furnished a lunch at noon and the party returned to Fresno last night in time for dinner.

The party left the Republican building yesterday morning at 9 o'clock and arrived at the springs shortly before noon, leaving at 4 o'clock.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Alexander and family; Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Chase, Miss Sadie Roberts, Miss Emma Glass, Jimmy Wilson, Stanley Higgins, Hank Keith, George Pardee, Hal Dorland, Percy Bunker, Eldred Beech, Leo Miller, Ray Walker, Roy L. Miller, H. J. ## BONNET WILL DEMONSTRATE PRUNING

A Noted Authority on Fresno Co. Vineyards To Be Here
Work Will Commence This Morning at the Hammond Ranch

In order to demonstrate improved methods of vine pruning in this county, Professor L. O. Bonnet, of the division of viticulture in the College of Agriculture, will be on the N. P. Hammond ranch, corner of Nevada and West avenues, this morning, to give the first of a series of twenty-two demonstrations. He will commence operations at 9:30.

Professor Bonnet is considered an authority on Fresno county vineyards. In 1918, he was in charge of the annual vineyard survey.

Demonstrations were commenced in Reedley and Parlier on November 23, when sixty growers attended. The schedule for the coming week is as follows:

Friday, December 12, 1:30 p. m.

LUDENDORFF'S OWN STORY

HOMBURG CONFERENCE CALLED IN RESPONSE TO STRONG URGINGS OF HINDENBURG AND LUDENDORFF

Worried About Chance That Russian Front Might Become Strong Again.—Grain From Ukraine to Prevent Famine.

LUDENDORFF THOUGHT FOREIGN OFFICE IN WRONG AND TOLD THEM SO.

Ludendorff engaged in a bitter contest with the Berlin and Vienna governments in the winter of 1917-18 over the treatment of the Bolsheviks and the treaty of Brest-Litovsk. Many things that puzzled outsiders at the time have been made clear by the two preceding articles on this subject. Foreign Ministers Kuhlmann and Czerin had different ideas of the fashion in which the Russian problem should be treated and were trying to mollify Lenin and Trotsky and get them to work with Germany.

Ludendorff fretted at the delay. His one purpose was to get the Eastern question settled so he could move troops and guns to the Western front, in preparation for his great drives which came in the spring and summer. The strong representations made by Hindenburg and him to the Kaiser finally led to the Homburg conference, of which he tells today.

By GENERAL ERICH LUDENDORFF

The conference at Homburg took place on February 12, 1918. It had a decisive influence on the events in the East. The Imperial Chancellor, the Vice-Chancellor, Secretary of State von Kuhlmann, the Field Marshal, the Chief of the General Staff, and I took part in it. His Majesty the Emperor, only attended at intervals.

Before this G. H. Q. had dispatched a number of telegrams to the Imperial Chancellor, asking for the armistice with Russia to be denounced. At the moment the Russian Army was no longer of any account but the Entente was on the look-out to strengthen its front, and the Bolshevik leaders were men of action who would work by propaganda, and if they were given time, by arms even without the Entente.

At any moment, somehow or some where, the Russian front might become strong again. Nor would Germany ever make peace until Russia had shown the way. This would make any attack in the West hopeless. And with that, we should have the opportunity of victorious finishing the world war, a war we were still waging, supported only by weak allies, against enemies superior in numbers. We also wanted to keep Russia as an auxiliary against the Bolsheviks, so it must not on any account be surrendered to them. It had already appealed for help.

Germany and Germany Badly In Need of Ukrainian Grain.

Which were we to obtain the grain, which, according to its experts, Austria-Hungary so badly needed? Germany could not supply it, but that is what it would have come to in the end. Germany itself was extremely short; the year before it had anticipated credits by early shipping, and now needed extra supplies itself. Russia was no longer supplying the anticipated quantity.

The prospects would be still worse if the coming harvest with us and our allies should be bad, as well as in Russia, which, as a matter of fact, experienced a complete failure. Left entirely to itself, without any outside help, Germany could not exist. As is proved by the great distress in the winter of 1918-19. Disaster would certainly have come without help from the Ukraine; even if the destruction of public order had not been a contributing cause.

The peace with the Ukraine rested, owing to the Bolshevik influence, then, on a weak foundation. That we should have to assist there with military force in order to get grain, unless the peace was to become a futile farce, was evident to the representatives of the Quadruple Alliance.

In order to prevent the Bolsheviks themselves from forming a new eastern front against us, we must inflict on their troops a short but sharp blow, which would in addition bring us a great quantity of grain. For the moment, no extensive operations were in contemplation.

Had to Penetrate Ukraine.

In the Ukraine we had to support the Bolsheviks, and against such conditions that we could get some military value out of it, and obtain grain and raw materials. In order to do that it was necessary to penetrate deep into the country; there was no alternative.

In order to prevent Russia being reinforced by the Entente, which the latter was still endeavoring to do, it was necessary to hold on their troops some of the Petrograd and work against it, and stores on the Murman coast. Otherwise England would certainly have been able to get us from there. We must prevent her from obtaining a footing there and on the Gulf of Finland, and in striking at the Bolshevik troops, we must advance through Livonia and Esthonia as far as Narva, in order to be able to act from that place in time, whenever necessary.

In Finland, too, which had already called upon us for help, we might find an ally against the Bolsheviks. In this way some effect would be produced against the Murman coast, and that on Petrograd would be increased. For some time past I had been in communication with a few Finnish gentlemen. Above all I would mention the first Ambassador of the young Finnish State, Herr Helt, who served it with ardor. At the very beginning of the war a number of young Finns, who fervently loved their country, had been formed into a rifle battalion, which was employed at Milan. Whether we should pressed every sign of peace agitation and strengthened the spirit of his country. His proceedings against Czerin showed clearly what we were to expect from him. He, too, thought only of victory, and like Lloyd George, had his country beating him. The enemy's conduct of the war gained immensely in vigor. In America also the fighting spirit became more and more pronounced. There, too, the government took action against all thought of peace with the greatest ruthlessness.

Under the powerful influence of Clemenceau and Lloyd George, Italy, survived the impression produced by her defeat, which had at first been very deep. In the hostile democratic states the government assumed more and more the character of a dictatorship.

So no the fresh employment of military force in the East was undesirable. But it was a military necessity, or worse, to sit still and watch the enemy increase his strength. It was necessary to act. That was demanded by the inexorable law of war. It would then be certain that we should obtain peace. That was all I wanted.

Close Gorden Against Reds.

It was in this sense that I expressed myself to the Chancellor and Vice-Chancellor, and pointed out to them the enormous difficulty of our task in the West. I also stated my belief that we should never get an honest peace from the Bolsheviks, but that they would be sure to continue to work for the revolutionizing of Germany. This danger it was impossible to exaggerate.

We could protect ourselves against Bolshevism by placing a close cordon beyond our frontiers. It was no doubt a disadvantage to stretch the containing line in the direction of the Gulf of Bothnia; but, owing to the large lakes, the line Dvinsk-Lake Peipus-tuif of Finland did not require more troops than that from Denmark to the Gulf of Riga. Any intermediate line would require more.

This was no case of military operation without visible results to a possible future expansion. It was a purely local and limited measure. I also laid stress on the satisfaction I personally felt at going to the assistance of the people of Livonia and Esthonia, especially those of our own German race, who were calling to us for help against their Bolshevik oppressors.

Kuhlmann Fought Scheme.

At first the Imperial Chancellor (Kierling) and the Vice-Chancellor (Payer) could not be got to agree to the denunciation of the Armistice. They based their refusal on the grounds in international politics and the condition of Austria-Hungary. Those arguments also determined the attitude of Herr von Kuhlmann (the Foreign Minister). Reasons of foreign policy were of no account.

Gradually the first two gentlemen were persuaded and agreed to denounce the Armistice, especially in view of the food situation.

Secretary of State von Kuhlmann remained obstinate. He declared, however, that not he, but the Imperial Chancellor, was constitutionally responsible, and that since the latter had resolved to denounce the Armistice, he would not refuse his further co-operation.

I could only assume that Secretary von Kuhlmann himself did not think his reasons for refusal very sound; otherwise, constitutions and responsibilities notwithstanding, he would have been bound to draw the appropriate conclusions as regards his own person. The office of Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs was not allowed to be overridden in a matter of such grave importance. His conduct could not inspire in me any confidence which I should so much have wished to give the head of the Foreign Office.

Row with Foreign Office.

Unfortunately, this incident also impaired my relations with other gentlemen of the Foreign Office, some of whom, especially among the non-professional diplomats, possessed capabilities of a high order. I was, however, quite indifferent to the persons themselves, and was concerned only with the cause. I was as strongly convinced that this office needed reform as was the great majority of the German people.

On the report of the Imperial Chancellor His Majesty agreed to the Armistice being denounced, or, as it was thought most correct from the point of view of international law, to the publication of the fact that, owing to Trotsky's failure to sign the peace treaty, the Armistice automatically came to an end.

What method they chose was immaterial to me.

How the Bolsheviks were quickly brought to terms by the advance of the German armies and the Germans were put into position to exploit the Ukraine is told by Ludendorff in our next installment. These measures freed troops and men from the eastern front for the drive he made in the west later.

How our vines planted in the very soil of the Ukraine were saved from being eaten by the locusts of the Gulf of Bothnia; but, owing to the large lakes, the line Dvinsk-Lake Peipus-tuif of Finland did not require more troops than that from Denmark to the Gulf of Riga. Any intermediate line would require more.

This was no case of military operation without visible results to a possible future expansion. It was a purely local and limited measure. ## WOULD SOCIALIZE MINE OWNERSHIP

Miners of the country are opposed to the return of the railroads to private ownership, according to Adolph Germer, nationally prominent labor leader, who spoke yesterday afternoon at the labor hall on "The coal strike and government intervention."

The statement on the miners' position government ownership was made by the speaker in response to a question from his audience, and then another question came asking when the miners would be satisfied with their situation and would cease striking.

Mr. Germer replied that this would come when the mines were owned by the people and worked for the people.

"Most people think that the mines are worked on this can be had to have," said the speaker. "This idea is all wrong. Miners are worked in order to make a profit for the mine owners. The idea of producing fuel for people to burn is not the reason."

Mr. Germer quoted freight rates between Chicago and eastern coal mines, and related how, after securing figures showing the cost of producing and distribution of coal he tried to get the mine owners to give him these figures to testify to their correctness before a board of inquiry.

Not one of the mine officials, some of them close personal friends to him, was willing to go on the stand and testify that the figures of Mr. Germer on the cost of production were correct.

The speaker showed how mines have to be repaired, and when the operators wish for any reason either to pinch the miners or to close down on the production to stop operation they shut down to repair their mines.

"When I say 'operators' I don't want you to understand me as speaking of the mine worker, said the speaker. "The operator is not the miner. He is the one who operates on the mine."

The mine men pictured conditions in the coal fields, where the miner is trying to get a little money but has to live in a little shack, and he said that through union organization and shorter hours, obtained the mine better health, and some little time to give to house and family, and to getting something better work from life. But even with these improved conditions, the life of the miner is hard and poorly paid.

The miner must look to his right at the ballot for many reforms, said the speaker. Government by injunction against the laboring man can only be overcome by the wise use of the vote of the great laboring class. Concluding that he was against "class hatred," Mr. Germer said that there is always on the part of the capitalist "class consciousness."
